Prof. Cook Sees Tuskegee.

Prof. George William Cook, of Howard University, recently visited Tuskegee Institute and of his visit to Tuskegee has written the following: "I had heard much of the miracle (Tuskegee) but I can say truthfully, that with me the half had never been told. What no doubt strikes the visitor upon first view of the school is its magnitude, and then by a closer examination, the magnitude of its usefulness is no less apparent. I cannot say that I have ever met any one thing that proves to me more of the uplift of our people than Tuskegee Institute. I notice that its influence is based upon first principles, such principles as make the foundation of any real, substantial progress in the world. I am thankful because it makes a great rift in a cloud that might otherwise throw a darkness leading to discouragement; but the evidence of the trend toward independence of life, personal support and that self reliance that makes for success are the things that cause me to speak in gratitude and to recognize the hand of God in it all. It was a privilege to me on that Sunday morning to see the review and inspection and to contrast that scene with the condition of our people prior to the Civil War."
